Samsung to Make Latest Foldable Phones Here

Subhrojit Mallick@timesgroup.com

Seoul: Samsung will be making its latest foldable smartphones locally in India. "I am happy to announce that both the Galaxy Z Flip5 and Z Fold5 will be manufactured in our Noida factory in India," Samsung Southwest Asia CEO JB Park told reporters here on Thursday.

The company will also pursue an aggressive marketing strategy in India to serve a growing base of premium smartphone users, mainly in the hinterlands where it plans to expand its presence to 10,000 retail stores, senior company executives said.

Park said Samsung is the fastest growing smartphone brand in the fast-expanding premium segment in India. Now in its fifth iteration, the latest foldables - Samsung Galaxy Z Flip5 and Z Fold5 - come with incremental upgrades such as a faster processor, thinner and lighter body, and a brighter display.

"The new devices were made possible because of world class R&D and manufacturing capabilities, especially in India," Park said.

To make them more palatable for the value-conscious Indian buyers in rural markets, Samsung has kept the effective prices lower than the previous generation through upgrade bonuses, no-cost EMIs and cashbacks from banks.

"We have seen uptakes of foldables not only in tier 1 and tier 2 cities, but also in the hinterlands. For example, we saw users using our Flip phone even in a small town like Churu in Rajasthan," said Aditya Babbar, senior director, mobile business, at Samsung India.

"We are going to 10,000 stores, a 30-40% increase from last year's presence," he said. "We are creating experience centres in these stores and training in-store representatives, which speaks of the investments we are making in rural India." Raju Pullan, senior VP of sales and marketing at Samsung India, said pre-reservations started in early June gave strong indications that the Flip phone will see lots of consumers switching from traditional smartphones to the foldable form factor because of the larger cover display.
